The system consists of a two-chamber treatment tank, system status panel, control unit, LCD, and an optional salt feed tank system that can be added for operation in fresh or brackish water. The device is designed for use on vessels 65 feet or less in length and accommodates most existing marine toilets. The device creates disinfectant from salt water. Source: Raritan Engineering Company, Inc Figure 2-1. Internal Components of the Electro Scan Treatment Tank Flushing moves waste to the maceration chamber for particle size reduction. Subsequent flushing moves the waste to the oxidation chamber where it is mixed and brought into direct contact with electrode plates. When these plates are submerged in salt water and supplied with electricity, hypochlorous acid is formed, which then breaks down organic waste products, including bacteria, by oxidation. The cycle runs for approximately two minutes in the second chamber, and the waste is held in the oxidation chamber until the next flushing cycle, then it is discharged. 2-1 This item ships from La Vergne,TN.
