Not illustrated. 1875 Excerpt: .bit-work upon them, Drew the straps forthwith through the buckles splendidly plated, And made fast after that the long reins broader (than usual), Led out the horses into the court, where the diligent groom now Had pushed forward the coach, by the pole it easily moving. 140 Evenly measured fastened they then to the balance with unsoiled Traces the rapid strength of the readily off-going horses. Hermann took up the whip, then sat he and rolled to the gateway. As the friends now quickly the roomy places had taken, Rolled off the carriage with speed, and left the pavement behind it, 145 Left in the rear the walls of the town and its elegant towers. Thus drove Hermann away, the well known new borough-road by, Sharply, and loitered not and drove uphill as adownhill. As he however now farther the tow r of the village caught...
