My sweet in herself surpasses The whole of the precious store; The rarest and richest of lasses, Compounded of scents, gems, and ore. From a polisht marble brow Fall locks of gold the brightest; And her ruby lips below Are teeth of pearls the whitest. As gleams of Orient skies Through cypress branches seen, Is the blue of her sapphire eyes Under their ebon screen. From oceans rosiest shells Her cheeks rich tint is drawn; And the music of distant bells Rings in her voices tone. Her breast is the pearl-homes lining, From Omans sunny sea; Her arms the ivory shining, Where gay lamps lighted be. On her lips, the dew I seize Is honey from virgin flowers; Her breath is the scented breeze From Mythas orange bowers. Though in thought, in toast, in...
